By Jahirul Islam

Good morning everyone. Thanks to Mashrur sir for giving me the time to speak with you. My name is Jahirul Islam. Friends call me Ratul. My roll no is 740.

Today I'm going to make a presentation on "Life in a cell". It won't take more than five minutes.

I've divided the presentation in three parts.

1. Use of cell phone in our life
2. How people get addicted to cell phone using
3. The affects of cell phone addiction

Cell phones have made our life easy. Although it saves our times but cell phone itself is a time wasting device.

1. Usage of cell phones in our life

Our life has become easier for cell phone. we use cell phones for communication. we don't have to go a long way for sending messages or to call someone. Anytime in any need we can communicate with anyone.

2. Cell phone addiction

Besides the advantages and being a useful thing cell phone has some negative sides. In spite of being a time saver it is mostly used as a time wasting device. Some people can't live without their phones. If I tell them to stay a week without cell phone, they can't. people generally spend time by listening music, watching videos, using the Internet, or chatting with friends.

3. Affects of cell phone addiction

Although cell phones have increased the quantity of communication, it has reduced the quality. Many of us can't live without their phones. Some people are so addicted to cell phones that they completely ignore the people around them. Communication over cell phone lacks some aspects of communication. Texts lack the tone of voice, gesture, stress of voice etc. Voice call can express tone of voice but lacks eye contacts, gestures etc. So sometimes this lead us to miscommunication.

So what I said in this presentation was about the overuse and addiction to cell phones. Sometime it looks like we're the device and cell phone is the user. They're all prisoners here of their own device. We should think about it. That all I wanted to say. Thank you.
